American People Will Compel Lasting Treaty

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Aug. 10.-"The peace envoys will not get out of the United States without concluding terms of peace," says Hayne Davis, noted internetional. international lawyer and prominent worker for international peace.

"Americans favor Japan, but there is a deeper feeling of sympathy in America for the Russian people than for any other people on earth, because the idea which will probably surpass it in mag-war we inclined to Japan. The very moment that peace is thought of the moment that peace is thought of the Russian people take their place in American hearts, and the whole nation echoed the progress of President Roosevelt for a just and lasting peace.

"I will not talk about that," she said.

People Mean It.

"The American people must know why peace does not come out of this conference, and such a protest will issue against a barren conference here, that against a barren conference here, that these envoys will find themselves against a force greater than the arguments of their opponents in the discussion at the council table, and they will come to terms before they leave America.

New Conditions.

"Another essential fact is that Russia, since this former peace meeting in which Japanese peace envoys took part,

"'A just and lasting peace."
"The words come from Roosevelt, now. They came from the lips of Lincoln, and Lincoln also said: 'Nothing is settled until it is settled right."
"To last, peace must be re-established on a just basis. Go back to the scenes which closed the war between China and Japan. A treaty of peace had been agreed upon, which gave Japan dominion over Chinese territory in Manchuria. Russia forbade the execution of the treaty.

"The other powers of Europe, who were present at the making of the treaty, backed Russia's prohibition, and Japan had to submit, but the Japanese envoys left that meeting resolved to make war on Russia for forcing them to renounce benefits already agreed to by China.

"The chance to make the war arose because Russia had moved soldiers into this Manchurian land while the siege of Pekin was on and refused to withdraw, them after peace was re-established, though she had agreed to do so.

"Japan has forced Russia out of the greater part of this territory now, while the other nations stood by as neutrals.
